rising of the rivers in their lower stretches will result only in crop damage the weather bureau announced this morning. The river is flooding the banks in the lowlands around Columbus, the bureau stated.

Clean Up Work Started
Debris, damaged property and rehabilitation work were the principal reminders of the five hour flood here early Saturday. Business outside the inundated district and sections where the water was not deep so that work of cleaning could be practically completed yesterday, was resumed today almost as usual. Removal of debris, mud and oil continued in other districts.

The exact number of dead and bodies recovered remained slightly in doubt early today, the list varying from 45 to 47. In several instances previously unidentified were reported as newly found when identified and in a few instances the same body was designated under two names, the person having been known that way. Checking of the list and search for more bodies continues.
